The Mental Health Benefits of Spending Time Outdoors from Alberta Health Services

Have you ever noticed the sense of calm you feel after spending time in nature? In addition to physical health benefits, outdoor activities have also been shown to promote and maintain your mental health. Being in green spaces (such as gardens, parks or forests) can significantly reduce cortisol (a stress hormone), and raise endorphin levels and dopamine production.

Additionally, the vitamin D you get from natural light can help regulate your sleep cycle. Sleeping away from artificial light and waking up with natural sunlight can also reset your circadian rhythm, which will result in better-quality sleeps and likely leave you feeling more alert and capable the following day. That's why one of the best things you can do right now is get outside and take advantage of summer at its peak. Whether it's tending to a community garden, taking a walk through your local park, or having a picnic outdoors, contact with nature can rejuvenate your body and mind.

What does it take to reap the benefits?

While some people can't get enough time outdoors, many of us may spend most of our time inside, even in the summer months. Your schedule, lifestyle, and access to green spaces can all play a role, but research has shown that spending at least two hours a week outdoors will allow you to reap the maximum mental health benefits.

Put your gardening skills to use for people in need. How often is it that you can enjoy a favourite hobby and help others in your community at the same time?

The Plant A Row, Grow A Row Project is a fun way to do both. It was initially started in Winnipeg in 1986 and came to Alberta in the 90's. We invite local gardeners to grow an extra row of vegetables, or earmark fruit and vegetables for donation to your local food bank. At harvest time, simply remove the majority of the garden dirt and take your produce in to your local food bank.

Pat yourself on the back for making a wonderful contribution to your community. Root vegetables are best; however, any produce items that can be easily handled and stored, such as cabbage, carrots, peas, beans, tomatoes, radishes, parsnips, sweet peppers, summer squash, and pears are welcome.

Due to the fragile nature of fruits and vegetables, donations are asked to be dropped off directly to your local food bank.

The contact info for the Food Bank is:

✦ Location: 4712 50 Street, Rycroft
